THE WOMAN I AM TODAY

In the years since my incarceration, I realized my way of thinking had to change in order to be the woman that my family has desperately wanted me to be. Once I realized I had the potential to change, I did it for myself. So, I've been devoted to maintaining a positive frame of mind by involving myself in learning everything available to me within this institution. At the beginning of every year I set two goals for myself that will ultimately help me achieve my dreams once I'm back in the community.

I know my personal growth and accomplishments will help me achieve my ultimate goal.
